The Institute of Jainology (IoJ), in partnership with the Jain All-Party Parliamentary Group (APPG), held its 22nd Annual Ahimsa Day at the House of Commons on 16 October 2025.

The event drew Members of Parliament, faith leaders, academics, and community representatives to reflect on this year's theme: "The Role of Faith During a Time of Multiple Existential Crises – with specific reference to Nostra Aetate."

This year marked the 60th anniversary of Nostra Aetate, the landmark Vatican declaration encouraging interfaith dialogue and recognition of other spiritual traditions. The evening was graced by Msgr Santiago Michael, representing the Vatican's Dicastery for Interreligious Dialogue, and His Eminence Archbishop Nikitas of Thyateira and Great Britain.

The programme began with a warm welcome from Dr Mehmood Sanghrajka, Managing Trustee of the IoJ, followed by devotional recitations of the Navkar Mantra and verses from Maitri Bhavanu, invoking peace and compassion. Matt Turmaine MP, newly appointed Chair of the Jain APPG, reaffirmed his support for the IoJ's campaign to include a "Jain" tick-box in the next UK Census and highlighted the importance of parliamentary engagement for the community.

A tribute was paid to the late Nemubhai Chandaria, former IoJ Chairman, recognising his pivotal role in establishing Jainism in the UK. The IoJ Ahimsa Award 2025 was presented to Dr Sohan Lal Gandhi for his lifelong dedication to non-violence, peace, and interfaith understanding, including leadership of the global Anuvrat Movement and advocacy at international forums such as the United Nations.

Msgr. Santiago Michael conveyed a message from Cardinal George Jacob Koovakad, praising Dr Gandhi and reflecting on the enduring relevance of Nostra Aetate in promoting dialogue, compassion, and moral guidance in a time of global challenges. Archbishop Nikitas emphasised faith as the soul of civilisation, urging self-reflection, humility, and the nurturing of shared virtues across communities. Dr Gandhi, in his acceptance speech, described Ahimsa as an active, courageous commitment to peace, reminding attendees that every act of violence begins in the mind and so must every act of peace. The evening concluded with updates on Jain manuscript studies and a vote of thanks, celebrating Ahimsa as a timeless ideal of compassion and understanding.
